“Last year was my first LCI Congress, and it immediately felt like an event I should have attended long before. My team and I spent the year exhibiting and sponsoring over 30 AEC events, but we went big on LCI because we were stoked about the conversations we knew would happen. They were thoughtful, curious, and at times challenging — in the best way. I spoke with people who were enthusiastic, skeptical, and deeply engaged, and being pushed to explain how what we’re building at Doxel fits within Lean thinking made the experience even more meaningful.

The exhibit hall was equally memorable. Vendors supported one another, real relationships formed quickly, and the environment felt collaborative rather than transactional. The quality of the conversations and connections made it easy to understand why so many exhibitors speak so highly of LCI Congress. You could feel the momentum.”
